A Legacy of Compassion and Comfort

Today we continue our series of “legacy” lessons that ask, “What will you leave to the next generation spiritually?” Very often churches are accused of (and sadly it is often true) being judgmental and harsh in manner, perhaps with an eye on placing another brick on the foundation of their ivory tower. The mind of Christ was far from this concept, but instead embraced compassion and comfort, even when it came to sin. Is that the legacy we will leave?

1. The crucial nature of compassion and comfort

2. How to build the habit of compassion comfort

3. The beginnings of compassion and comfort

Is yours a legacy one of compassion and comfort?

Minute Devotionals

Have you ever noticed how quickly people take sides on certain issues? Recently drug company raised the rates of a and many instantly cried "greed." Yet, the issues are fairly complex and involve much more. As Christians we ought to "prove all things." That means we do not make "knee-jerk" reactions, but instead always seek fullness of truth, lest we quickly side with our enemy.
